1. Personal data protection

EMA is responsible for the handling of personal data belonging to EMA website users. User personal data are collected for the handling of user requests. To find out more, users are invited to consult our data protection policy.

2. Cookies

Users are informed that, upon visiting the site, cookies may be installed automatically on their browsing software. You can activate/deactivate your cookies at any time.

2.1 What is a cookie?

A cookie is a text file that is left on your computer when you visit a website. It contains user data intended to aid browsing and allow certain features such as storing the content of a basket, recording the language settings of a website or even targeted marketing.

2.2 What is the purpose of our cookies?

The cookies left on your computer, tablet or mobile allow us to recognise your browser when you visit our website. In an effort to provide you with a quality service, we use cookies to:

- make traffic statistics (visitor numbers, pages viewed, etc.) and to track and improve the quality of our services.
- to adapt the presentation of our site to the display settings for our terminal.
- to provide content related to your areas of interest and personalise the offers we show you.

2.3 What happens if I don't allow cookies?

If cookies are restricted on your computer, tablet or mobile, your experience on our website may be limited (for example, you might not be able to browse freely across the whole site).

How to deactivate/activate cookies? You can choose to deactivate cookies on your browser at any time following the instructions provided in the help files of your browser.

You can also change the cookie settings directly in the settings on your browser. Google Chrome:
